This year's theme, "Integrating Materials Management: Moving Toward a Natural Balance", continues the collective momentum and strength for us to create a better future. The release of toxic compounds into the environment should occur only at rates that are comparable to the natural biological process. What does that mean for us and our environment? Come hear Dr. Ken Geiser, Co-Director, Lowell Center for Sustainable Production, University of Massachusetts. Dr. Geiser is renowned for promoting environmentally and socially responsible practices through toxic chemical reduction.

Conference information, including how to register, will be available in February at
